A Year of New and Old

On a hot summer evening, a new year began at Bethel College. Many new faces among faculty and students were present at Opening Assembly. However, 1983-84 began in the traditional way as President Harold Schultz and Student Senate President Tammy Duvanel rang in the academic year.

Shultz spoke of the need for excellence in education, a predominant theme both on the national level and at Bethel as increasing technology placed new demands on college students, faculty and administrators.

Afterward, students, faculty and staff gathered on the Green to eat watermelon, greet friends, old and new, and talk about the year ahead.

SHARING in the food and fellowship, Anne Friesen and Renee Wiens enjoy the traditional Fall Watermelon Feed.

THE PINBALL WIZARD, Chad Janzen tries his hand at pinball in the game room, a popular place for after-dinner exercise.

TUNING UP for a Concert on the Green, the Bethel Wind Ensemble listens to Director Don Kehrberg who uses the short break to instruct the group.

FIGHTING THE SUN, Nokwazi Khumalo prepares for a return against her opponent.

KICK IT! David Gullman races for the ball in a Men's A team game against WSU.

SEARCHINGLY, Alice Deckert looks downfield for an open teammate to receive her pass.

Threshers Triumphant— A Winning Autumn

ON THE SIDELINES, Trainer Tom Vogt bandages Mike Miller, injured in Bethel's home win over Ottawa.

"SPIKE!" Robin Craig shouts encouragement while teammates and fans provide support from the sidelines.

ATTENDANCE at Convocation may be required, but attention certainly isn't. Ray Smith takes the opportunity for a short snooze.

ON THE LIBRARY'S 2nd floor, students reach for new heights in education.

PLEASE, LET THERE BE MAIL. Ron Adams hopes for a letter.

JEFF THODE procrastinates at the Goering Hall proctor's desk.

MEANWHILE BACK AT THE ROOM...

BRRR!! Barb Krehbiel, Anne Unruh and Rachel Klassen bundle up to watch Bethel trounce Friends.

ORIENTATION?! Martsje Van der Schaf whirls round during New Student Orientation... Games.

BEWILDERED PAIR, Antipholus and Dromio are caught in the confusion of the mistaken identities.

ADRIANA confronts a bewildered Dromio as Luciana looks on.

THE MIRROR CRACKS as the two Antipholuses and the two Dromios become aware of their identical twins in Bethel's version of Shakespeare's Comedy of Errors.

NICK BURNS shows off his favorite toy, Bubbles, to case workers, Sandra Markowitz and Albert Amundson in A Thousand Clowns. They are not amused.

A Cool, Wet Fall Fest

On October 7-9, 1983, the Bethel Family celebrated Fall Fest. The theme, "Living as Neighbors," reflected Bethel's commitment to continued contact and sharing with other nations and other peoples.

On Friday, students, faculty and staff braved a cool afternoon to compete in the Almost Anything Goes Contest on the Green.

Even though the Kansas autumn brought a cold, wet Saturday, several thousand people gathered on the campus for the festivities. Saturday was filled with the traditional crafts fair, ethnic food, booths, and the benefit auction, as well as demonstrations by the new computer science department. On Saturday evening, the Threshers defeated Bethany in the homecoming football game.

Fall Fest concluded with the Sunday morning worship service and then final showings of the Fall Fest Drama Thousand Clowns.

IN A BALANCING ACT, R. B. Woods demonstrates the original Big Wheel.

THE ANYTHING GOES CONTEST makes a big splash with Beth Goerzen and Mark Ortman as they show their style of balloon busting.

NEIGHBORS from across the universe found their way to Fall Fest.

RUNNING BACKWARDS? Ken Re-mple and his teammates seem to find this part of the Anything Goes Contest as confusing as Academic registration.

ON THE RED CARPET, Brad Flickinger enjoys a stroll through the Carpet Square Race.

ON THE AIR! "This is Rachel Klassen keeping you up to date on Fall Fest activities. And now for the weather."

REACHING OUT, Doug Siemens and Barb Nestler promote the use of the neighborhood board.

Halloween Craziness Invades Bethel

The Halloween Party in the SAC was a unique experience for all who attended. Everything from streetwalkers to generic colas to Bethel's own Herman Bubbet and Wilsha Knootz were there.

The distinguished panel of faculty judges acknowledged a number of people for their achievements. Several of the prizewinners are pictured at right.

ALL DRESSED UP and to the cafeteria they go! Brian, Chuck and Mark put on quite a flashy show.

WHO WAS that capped nurse? Nurse: "Natalie" Smucker gets some curious looks from the cafeteria crowd.

IN LOW FASHION, Joel Goertz models the latest style.

IT'S A MISTAKE! Mod 2B portrays a rather embarrassing situation.

A HERD OF MICE, too big to be tangled with invade the Halloween dinner as Greta Hiebert tries to control them.

ALOHA FROM 6A! The island girls create a tropical mood for Halloween. Dawn Abrahams, the main course in the pig out, is about to be served.

Christmas at a Country School

From December 1-3, Memorial Hall became a Country School House for Bethel's annual Christmas Festival. Complete with kerosene lamps, red-checked tablecloths, paper streamers and decorated blackboards, the atmosphere recalled an earlier time.

The Wind Ensemble welcomed the guests, and carolers entertained the crowd as they enjoyed a country ham dinner. Under the supervision of teacher Gail Lutsch, the pupils made their way through skits, plays and the Nativity Play.

The Community Choir continued the celebration, and a visit from St. Nick with treats for all closed out the evening.

SCHOOLMARM Gail Lutsch leads a slightly mutilated version of "Jingle Bells."

SINGING JOYFULLY, the College and Community Choirs raise their voices in celebration of Christmas and the spirit of the season.

ONLY FIVE, a reluctant Dawn Abrahams recites a poem for the audience.

EARTH AND SKY, Michael Hatchette and Melissa Siemens present a quiet moment, READER'S THEATRE, with stories old and new, helps keep the kids going at the Country School Program.

EVEN AMONGST CHANGES, of achievement in the Fine Arts. Ami time as much as in class.
Bethel students continue the tradition Regier enjoys painting in her spare

PEOPLE ARE THE KEYS to Bethel College and what it stands for as an institution. Even as technology becomes an ever increasing part of the college, individuals define its mission.

In Memory of Bradley J. Flickinger

August 31, 1954 - Feb. 26, 1984

Words are so clumsy and inadequate when they are asked to express the meaning and impact of a life lived. Words can never fully share the things of the heart which is where all lives and relationships are lived. And yet words are all we have, so we try in our own way to give expression to the meaning Brad Flickinger had for us. For Brad, like all of us, was a unique and special human being created in the image of God.

Brad was born on August 31, 1954 and grew up mainly in the Pretty Prairie, Ks. area.

Brad came to Bethel in the fall of 1972 to begin his undergraduate education. After two years at Bethel College, he interrupted his formal studies to get a fresh sense of direction. In Oregon, he found it in the person of Deb Sohrt. They were married on July 24, 1976.

After three years of growing into his new family, he and Deb returned to Bethel in 1979 to complete his undergraduate degree. In the spring of 1982, Brad received his Bachelor of Arts Degree in Bible and Religion.

After graduation, Brad was employed at Bethel as Resident Director along with Deb at Haury Hall and as Director of Resident Life. He was also a part of the Religious Life Team as well as Assistant Women's Basketball Coach.

Brad will live on in our lives and memories as a giving and selfless person, As some have said:

"Superficially, as members of the dorm, we appreciated Brad for his competence and helpfulness. As we began to know him a little better, we experienced his very thoughtful nature and capacity for caring. We hope that we knew him well enough to see that in his life, we saw what life should be."

"I will miss Brad's sense of humor, his love for snowball fights and just the fact that he was always there."

"Brad was committed. . . committed to Deb, committed to Bethel College, committed to God, committed to all students, committed to a profession which he was going to graduate school to continue."

"I think he would be, in his usual modest way, suprised to know how many people saw in him a model for Christian commitment and Christian living."

"The way he related to people was very Christ-like. I never heard him put a person down or criticize them. He related in an open, honest and caring way, even when correcting a person's mistakes."

"I count the days and months Brad shared with me as a special gift. Even though Brad's days were young, one thing I know today: if peace, love, joy and integrity are what we seek in life, then Brad has arrived."

We who loved Brad would term his death untimely and premature, but rest in the assurance that God makes no mistakes. We believe in the faith of the 5-year-old who said, "When I see God, I'll see Brad."

—Gordon Funk

During the 1983 campaign, the Thresher football team chalked up its most impressive mark in a number of years. The Thresher's 6-3 finish left them in fourth place in the Kansas Collegiate Athletic Conference.

BC started the season out right by whipping arch-rival Tabor College. The Bluejays left Newton slightly de-feathered after Bethel rolled to a 23-6 victory.

Then, after losing to Sterling and St. Mary's, the Threshers triumphed in five of their last six games, losing only to league champion Southwestern.

On offensive, BC was led by the aerial connection of quarterback Milan Zuzek and split end David Jones and by the rushing of freshman standout Darnell Martin.

Defensively, the Threshers were anchored by Micheal Glenn, Larry Cole, Eric Rhoades and Scott Dickinson.

Athletic Director George Rogers summed up Bethel's season by saying, "It was a gratifying season for us because we did better than we expected. We knew we had potential, and when that potential is realized, that's when the gratification comes."

TOUCHDOWN!! With three seconds left in the first half, Ed Smith goes up for a touchdown pass from Bethel quarterback Milan Zuzek.

TRYING TO EVADE a tackler, Darnell Martin runs the ball.

Under the motto "Let It Happen," the Thresher volleyball team put together another strong season, finishing with an overall record of 33-14. According to Coach Diane Flickner, "The team met every challenge with excitement and positiveness."

The team captured its ninth consecutive KCAC title and its fourth state championship title in the last six years. After defeating Bethany Nazarene for the Bi-District crown, the Threshers advanced to a ninth place finish at the national tournament in South Carolina.

When singling out individual performers on the 1983 squad, Flickner said, "Cindy Napper and Lori DeGarmo are a part of an elite group who have been a part of the program for a four year period. They deserve much credit for our success this season."

In looking at the year as a whole, Flickner commented, "The 1983 Bethel College Volleyball team is and always will be very special. We made the commitment and created a bond that was so strong. We believed we were magic."

PUTTING IT OVER, Robin Craig sends the ball back over the net as Cindy Napper and Kara Hobbs watch.

SETTING for Gwen Harms spike, Lori DeGarmo arcs the ball cross-court.

TEAMWORK is essential to Beth-el's ongoing success on the court. Everyone is in the action as Diana Erb sets for her teammates.

It was a long autumn for the Bethel Women's Tennis Team. Due to a lack of experience, the team won only one match in dual play and finished fifth in the KCAC.

"We had a lot of inexperienced players," said Coach Kevin Lehr. "Two team members never played in high school."

Even though match results were disappointing, the season provided an opportunity for the newer players on the team to gain experience. "Everyone improved a lot," said Lehr.

Bethel did record success in the number one and number two singles spots. Senior Carrie Woods finished third in the conference at number one. At number two, senior Kathy Wedel played well throughout the year according to Lehr.

BENDING LOW, Kay Schroeder concentrates on hitting her backhand. Schroeder held down the number four singles spot for the Threshers, taking fourth in the KCAC at that position.

LACK OF EXPERIENCE hurt the team. Coach Kevin Lehr instructs Carol Wadel, Kay Schroeder, Cindy Miller and Nokwazi Khumalo.

BUNDLED UP, Carrie Woods defies the cold with a look of determination.

After beginning the season a discouraging 0-8, the Threshers came back to post a season mark of 9-15. The season was highlighted by consecutive wins over Tabor.

According to sophomore standout Kara Hobbs, the team had to cross a number of hurdles. She noted that only half of the team consisted of returning players and that there were four freshmen.

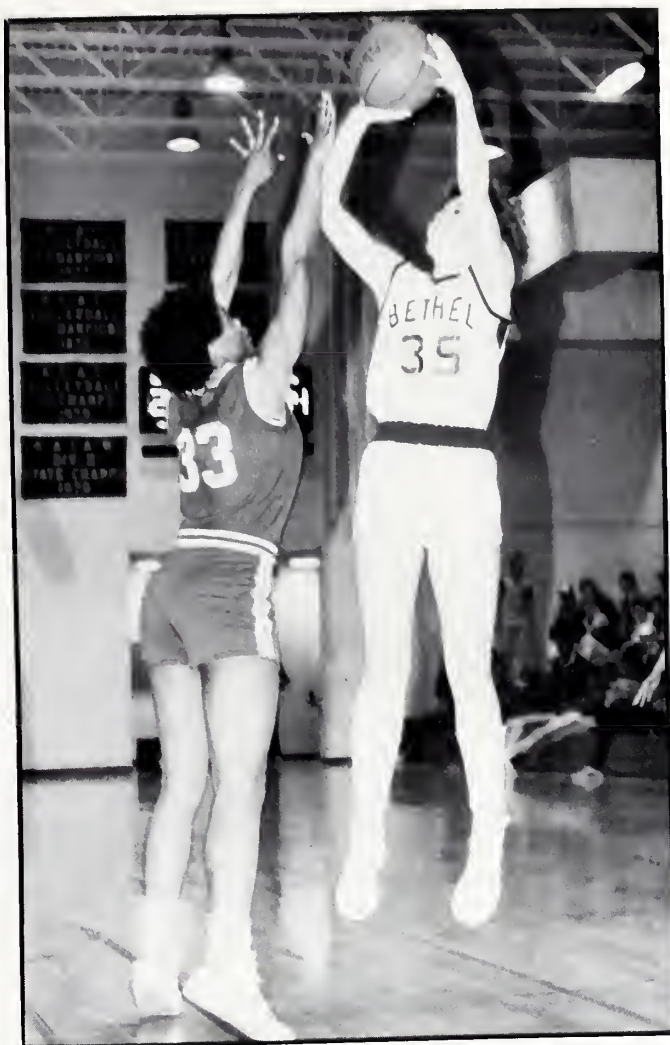

"There were many obstacles that the team had to overcome. I felt like everyone handled the situation very well and gave it their best effort."

Hobbs led the conference in scoring and was a unanimous pick to the all-KCAC team. She was also named to the all-District 10 team.

Hobbs said that she was surprised by the honors and was disappointed that other members of the team did not receive recognition.

Overall, the team came together and worked well according to Hobbs. "We were very supportive of one another," she said. "I felt the team had a lot of personality."

The 1983-84 season was a frustrating one for the Thresher Basketball team. After a strong start, the Threshers fell to ninth place in the KCAC.

Early on, the team fared well, winning three of its first five games. However, after Christmas the Threshers met with hard times and won only one of the next 17 games.

The year ended on a high note when BC defeated McPherson 97-91 in the last game of the season.

The Threshers were led on the court by junior center James Regier and junior forward Leon Upshaw. Both players received Honorable Mention on the All-KCAC team.

Looking back on the year, Coach Jim Robb said, "It was a disappointment for all of us. However, we know that games are made off the court and the future looks bright."

Consistent with past years, the Thresher Track Team ran up a strong season.

The women's team finished second in the KCAC which is "about where we usually are," according to Coach George Rogers. The men's team placed fourth which is "about one place back," Rogers said.

The highlight of the season was the number of spots in which the team qualified for the NAIA Nationals. In track events, junior Debbie Regier qualified in the 200 and 400 meter races, and senior Andrea Schmidt earned a place in the 200 meter. The women's mile relay team, consisting of Regier, Schmidt, senior Carmen Goering and freshman Sandi Graber, also claimed a spot.

In field events, senior Tim Conrad went in both the discus and the hammer throw, and Eric Unrau qualified in the high jump after improving his own school record to 6-10.

Like the spring weather in Kansas, the Men's Tennis team had both bright spots and off days. Overall, the team "did very well in dual matches throughout the year," according to Coach Kevin Lehr.

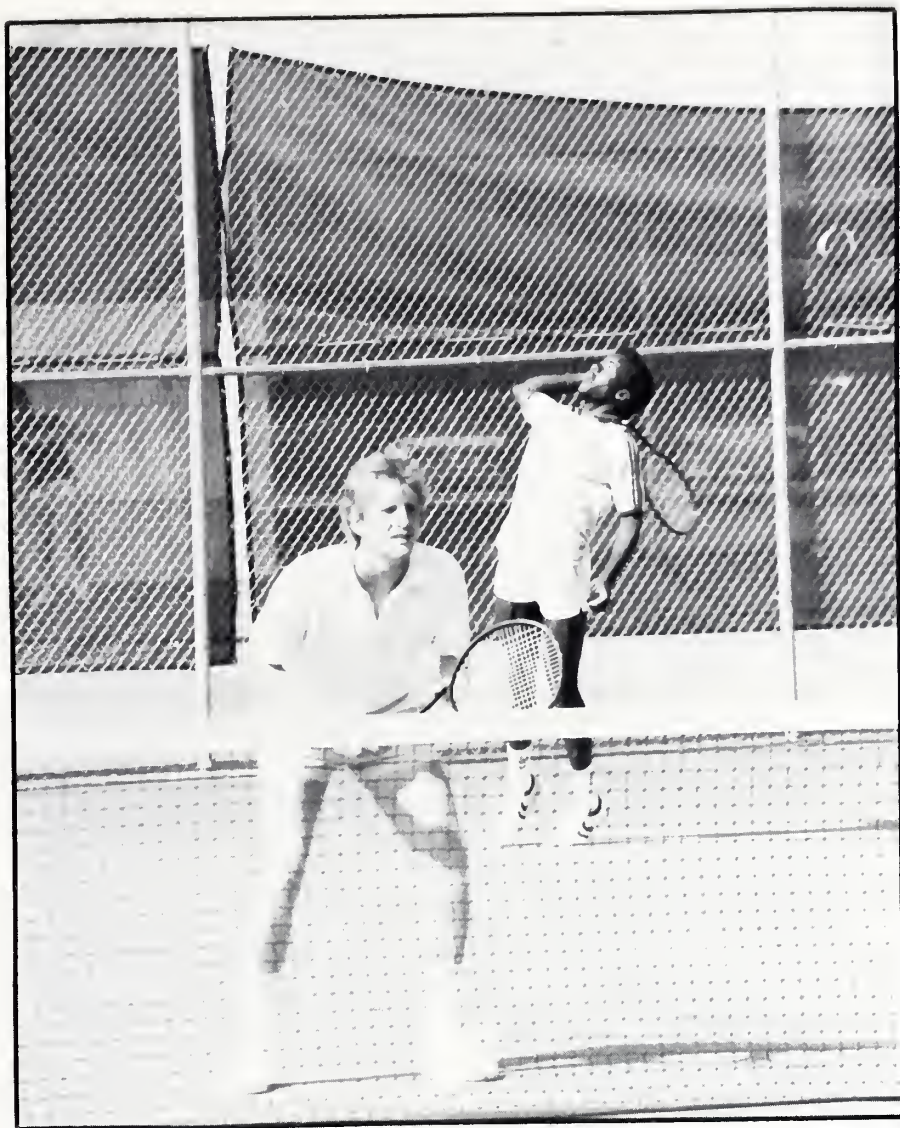

However, at the KCAC tournament, the Threshers did not place as high as Lehr expected. Due to the luck of the draw, the team faced very tough opposition in the first round and finished the tournament in a tie for fourth place.

Some strong individual performances stood out during the season. Freshman Ron Adams was a unanimous choice to the all-KCAC team in the number two singles spot.

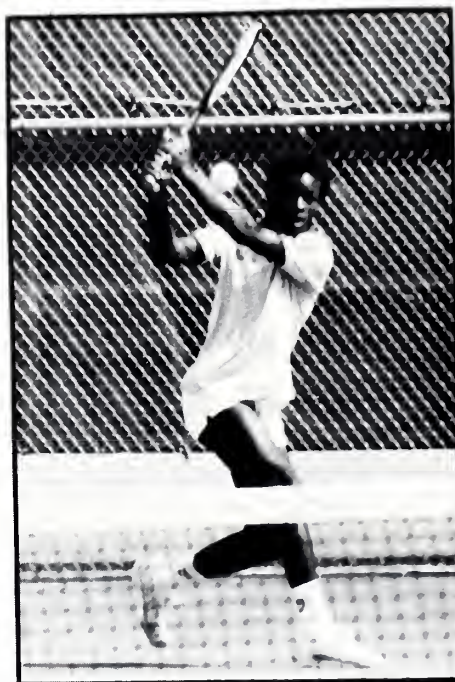

Terri Schroeder and Marti Ropp played very well in the number five and six singles spots according to Lehr. "Terri improved 100 percent as the season went on," he said.

In summing up the season, Lehr stated, "I was very pleased with our dual matches, but not as pleased at the tournament results."

A Year of Growth for Women's Soccer

WOMEN'S SOCCER TEAM—First Row: Linda Woods, Jenny Sieffert, Anne Miller, Elaine Hinshaw. Second Row: Anita Badertscher, Cheryl Stucky, Grace Wenger. Heidi Schmidt, Kimberly Schmidt. Third Row: Doris Diyck, Angie Smith, Karen Enns, Sue Flickinger, Martsje Van der Schaaf, Greta Hiebert.

In 1983-83, women's soccer took up where it left off in 1982-83 and continued to grow as a sport on the Bethel Campus.

According to co-coach Elaine Hinshaw, "There was a big increase in terms of interest." She noted that between 20 and 25 people showed interest and participated on the team in one way or another.

Competing in the Kansas Soccer League's Women's Division, the team finished with a 3-4 mark.

Senior goalie Sue Flickinger said that the team had both high and low scoring games. In a couple of matches the team scored seven or eight goals, but the majority were in the three to four goal range. "In the high scoring games, we usually wiped the other team out; in the low scoring games, it was about even," she said.

Both Flickinger and Hinshaw noted that there were no real stars on the team. "We don't like to mention one or two people," said Hinshaw. "We really want to emphasize the team effort."

The women's soccer team was formed in the fall of 1982 by Hinshaw and her husband, Chris. "There was a lot of interest simultaneous with the urge on our part to organize a team," she said.

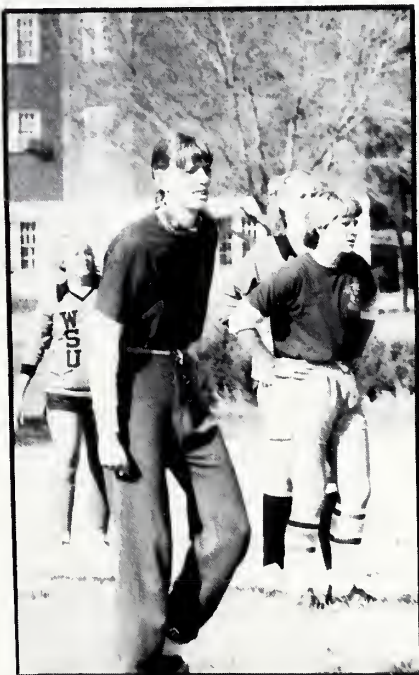

Senior Grace Wenger echoed the feelings of a number of team members about how the year progressed. "We really came together as a team," she said. "The enthusiasm was really great."

CHANGING DIRECTIONS, Elaine Hinshaw stops to get a better angle on the ball so she can send it Bethel's direction. Hinshaw helped found the women's soccer team in 1983.

Acting as a club instead of a college supported sport, the Bethel Men's Soccer Team again completed a successful fall season under new coach Tim Lehman.

The squad booted their way to a 7-1 finish in the Kansas Soccer League's Collegiate Division and earned a spot in the championship match. In a hard fought battle, the Threshers lost to Emporia State University and ended their season with an overall mark of 7-4.

According to Lehman, "There was no one player who gelled the whole team. The whole A-team played well." However, he pointed to Dave Gullman and John Simelane as scoring leaders for the club.

Unlike regular sports, soccer operates from student fees instead of on a budget which is included in regular college expenditures.

All in all, Lehman said, "Fall was a very successful season for us."

EVADING SHOCKER DEFENDERS, Mysheni Belle sends a pass toward Mbuso Mgnomezulu, hoping to improve the Thresher's fortunes. The team lost to WSU but had a winning season.

Regular college sports form only a part of the opportunity for athletics at Bethel. For those who feel the need to experience the "thrill of victory" but don't have the time for varsity sports a wide range of intramural competition provides an outlet.

According to Intramural Director Tim Allen, people participate in intramural activities at different levels. "President Schultz puts a strong emphasis on intramurals. There is great participation among men. But I am a little disappointed in the women, especially from Haury."

Reasons for playing intramural sports also vary. Freshman Renee Wiens enjoys intramurals because "it's a good way to work out my frustrations of the day," while sophomore Jeff Taylor sees it as "the excitement without the effort."

Sophomore Atlee Preheim summed up the nature of intramurals. He sees competition as "social interaction that goes beyond the classroom. It's a good opportunity to have competition with friends in a variety of events you don't specialize in."

HOPING this time its right, Becky Nikkel waits for Stein Goering's assistance with her computer program.

Current programs such as the newly developed computer department help students keep a futuristic method in learning, while clubs, organizations and volunteer activities balance academic loads.

Global Issues Simulation: Ode to the Survivors

THE LATEST NEWS on the countries' policies comes to Charles Benjamin through the Control room.

IN THE CONTROL ROOM, Paul Reimer obtains and records the nations' decisions.

A simulating experience? Perhaps participants in the International Relations Simulation did not always even consider it to be a scintillating experience, but nevertheless, the simulation, coordinated by political science professor Charles Benjamin, was indeed a learning experience.

Each week there were five to ten formal decision periods during which countries could trade, arm or do nothing with other countries. Each decision affected the country's GNP. Countries could also declare war, and in fact, this was done quite frequently.

The simulation game, which was modeled after one used at the University of Southern California, was designed to show students in general terms how international decisions are made in stress-filled situations.

The simulation was not in fact like the real world in many respects, yet participants found that there was often a ring of truth to the events that took place.

IN THE NEW COMPUTER ROOM, computer during interterm.
Doug Penner works at a Commodore

Let's be brutally honest. Computers are gradually emerging as necessary tools in higher education.

The punchline is that computers can assist students to develop their competencies to evaluate and make judgments, and to adapt to new challenges and changing situations.

Consequently, Bethel College wants to be involved in computers in a manner that is consistent with a liberal arts education.

Also, the rapid realization that technology has arrived in higher education has generated many new ideas for potential application of computers. Unfortunately, due to the financial constraints facing colleges such as B.C. and the continuing high cost of high technology, many of these bold ideas may never be realized.

Despite the financial crunch facing the college, Bethel currently provides twelve microcomputers—six Apple Systems, two I.B.M.'s, and four Commodores. The college also has the use of the ACCK Computer center by means of terminals located on campus which connect directly to a Harris computer.

Stein Goering, an instructor in Computer Science, feels that, although there have been some cut-backs in some departments, the proverbial well has not yet run dry. He hopes that money will be available to expand this new field which promises a new creative form of education.

For those who might wonder "why the computer initiative," Academic Dean Marion Deckert, has a good answer. He points out that the mission of a liberal arts education is to expand an individual's potential and ability to participate effectively in society's affairs.

"Teaching students to use a computer is not merely to provide job skills for later on but to enhance their understanding of certain aspects of human knowledge and understanding," said Deckert.

The computer, hence, is an unavoidable part of our world which will increase in influence in the years to come. Bethel College realizes that a liberally educated person should be able to understand both the computer's strengths and weaknesses and be able to use its capabilities.

Maintenance Performs Vital Role

The Maintenance Department is a vital part of Bethel College, yet it seems that little is known on campus about the department and its duties.

Physical Plant Director Steve Krehbiel heads the department which he says has a lot of what he calls "traditional and nontraditional jobs." The traditional jobs are those of the custodians, mechanics, carpenters, etc.

Nontraditional jobs are those that he likes to call "VS" jobs. These are held by a couple of retired men who do part time jobs around the campus such as painting and furniture repair.

The duties which the Maintenance Department performs "depend on your definition of maintenance," said Krehbiel. "Actually it is to maintain the buildings at a set standard, which is set by the administration."

But this is not all they do. The Maintenance Department also does special projects and construction. The employees, enjoy these more, but, said Krehbiel, "We can't spend all our time on special projects, then nothing else would get done, so we keep a lot of people doing needed things."

The department also sets up rooms for special events and classes.

The Bethel College Maintenance Department is an important part of the campus—one we cannot do without.

Kauffman Marks New Beginning

A museum has been a part of Bethel College since the 1890s when the collections were housed in the Administration building. Now the Kauffman Museum collection is housed in a new brick building which had its grand opening in October, 1983.

Although a museum has been a part of Bethel almost since the beginning, the collections necessary to make it deserving of recognition were donated in 1940 by Charles J. Kauffman of Freeman, S.D.

Charles Kauffman was a school teacher and a farmer who spent his spare time collecting and mounting birds and animals. His collection demanded more space than he had available, so when he was invited to bring his collection to Bethel College, he accepted. He came to Bethel and became assistant curator of the museum.

Kauffman, at the 1941 opening of his museum in old Alumni Hall stated that a museum must have a soul to be more than a "mechanical collection and classification of lifeless material;" it should provide "opportunity for learning;" for "fellowship in its most universal sense" and be "a place of inspiration;" to instill "greater appreciation and understanding of a wonderful creation and a wonderful Creator."

This idea of a museum having a soul is what constitutes the permanent exhibit of the Kauffman Museum according to present curator Reinhold Janzen.

Janzen stated that the storyline of the permanent exhibit contains three areas. The first being the Native American cultures and the natural environment. The second area is the immigrant story and the "transformation of the prairie into a rich agricultural producing environment," said Janzen. It portrays the progress from hand tools to the high technology machines of today which came with increasing wealth. This exhibit also shows the Mennonite creation of MCC missions and relief effort. The third part of the story line is the global community of the Mennonites, including encounters across time and culture. The story line of the Kauffman Museum addresses areas such as who the Mennonites are, where they come from and what they believe.

To build the museum and keep it going has taken much donation of time and money. Janzen said that "it really is only through volunteers that we can keep the doors open on weekends."

Along with several part time staff members, there are many people who volunteer their time to the museum. There are five people who work cataloguing, about a dozen who work as docents (museum language for teacher) and tour guides, and a number of people who work at various carpentry jobs.

The Kauffman Museum has an estimated 40,000 artifacts although these collection will not all be displayed. Museums generally show only a fourth or less of their total collections said Janzen.

However, "the collections are accessible to anyone who has an interest and wants to research," and they are "allowing space for temporary exhibits or a sequence of exhibits that will change periodically," according to Janzen

The majority of the collections are donated, stated Janzen, "by families who think they have something significant." The museum has a small budget with which to buy a minority of artifacts to fill gaps in the collections.

Some of the most significant artifacts include the Deknatel organ which was made in Germany and dates back to the 1740s, the Mesopotamian artifacts which are over 4,000 years old, and the ethnographic materials which reflect different cultures around the world and contain over 200 African masks. These and many more collections make the Kauffman Museum a special and significant museum.

In speaking of the new facility, Janzen stated that the "facility makes it possible to have a professional museum." For now there is adequate storage and exhibition space. "Anything larger would cost a great deal more in operating funds," she said. This museum was built in such a way that it can grow and be added on to.

Since the opening of the present museum in October, 1983, over 2,000 people have toured it. It is open for public viewing from 1:00 to 4:30 p.m. Friday, Saturday and Sunday. A permanent exhibit is planned for completion in 1987 to coincide with the centennial of Bethel College.

STUFFED ANIMALS are a large portion of the collection donated by the founder.

CURATOR Reinhold Janzen displays an exhibit which forms part of the Mennonite immigration story.

Theatre Holds Future for Abrahams

by Rachel Klaassen

"I heard the laughter and applause, and I wanted more. My theatre feeling started back there," says Abrahams of her first introduction to the stage as a high school freshman.

Then she remembers a bit farther back, "I played dress-up from day one. . . and I was always making up my own commercials." Her imagination and enthusiasm gave her an advantage when auditioning for an elementary school play; she smiles as she recalls the one-line part: "We have nothing left to give."

Since then, Abrahams has continued giving her time to the theatre. "I've had every class from A-Z in the theatre, except Shakespeare and Make-up," says Abrahams. Stage managing, acting, arranging for publicity and directing have all been a part of her experience, sometimes at the expense of other demands.

Readers Theatre is yet another example. For all eight semesters Abrahams has been enjoying the laughter from the audiences and within the group.

At four feet, two inches (the result of achondroplasia), Abrahams finds that sometimes experience is not enough. At her first job interview for a summer theatre program, Abrahams says that the man doing the interview gave her "an uneasy feeling. I could tell he was thinking, 'I wonder if her height hinders what she can do,' but all he said was 'I can see you're very experienced, we'll call you'."

There are people who wonder what someone can do with a Speech and Drama major besides teach. Abrahams says, "I have news for them. I plan to work in the theatre, probably for the rest of my life."

After traveling to New York City on a theatre tour, she says, "the city fascinated me, but I didn't like it;" she is considering several other "theatre cities." Her family will be an important consideration in her decision, but she says, "I do know that I'll be in the theatre somewhere!"

Rempel Studies Self-Esteem

by Carolyn Heide

Psychology majors on the Bethel campus have been referred to as the "dreaded questionnaire bearers." Carl Rempel, senior, happens to fall into this category, walking the campus with questionnaires in hand for his Social Science Seminar research project on how people with different levels of self-esteem respond to failure situations.

Rempel designed the research to show whether there was a correlation between failure situations and low self-esteem people, and to see if these people with low self-esteem showed the same behaviors as someone who fits into a response called learned helplessness.

Using a combination of a puzzle and initial and follow-up questionnaires, Rempel tested his hypotheses on volunteers from first year psychology class.

When he assessed the results of his

"DREADED QUESTIONNAIRE-BEARER," Carl Rempel rests for a moment before class. He seems glad the year is about over.

study, Rempel found that his research did not prove a link between low self-esteem and learned helplessness. However, he did find that self-esteem is related to the way subjects view failure situations.

"Probably the most I learned from it was an appreciation for research psychologists for all the work they go to—the whole area of research, and that I'm glad I'm not the one that's going to be doing it the rest of my life."

Rempel plans on working at Prairie View, Newton, as a mental worker, for at least one year after graduating. Further down the road, he is thinking about getting into pastoral counseling, which would mean attending seminary. "My main purpose is to pull the psychology into my theology," Rempel concluded.

Voth's Work Expresses Energy

by Carla Reimer

For senior art major Brian Voth, art is "expression of your personality and experience" which can't be forced. "I don't make a conscious effort to sit down and think up a creative idea. I get my ideas from observing people and events," he said.

"A couple of weeks ago I went to a kinda sleazy bar... a place called 'Caroline's' in Wichita... near the bus station, so a lot of transients come in. A jazz quartet was playing the old pieces; it was like we had just walked off the street in the '40's or '50's.

"Something like that is inspiring. It doesn't necessarily make me want to print pictures of 'Caroline's,' but that makes me want to do art because there's so much being expressed there," said Voth.

Although Voth is presently "a real lover of modern art," he believes "you can't just walk in and start doing abstract expressions." He recalls how the Renaissance and Classicist periods were his big favorites in high school. "You didn't paint the Madonna any other way except the way you were supposed to," said Voth.

In contrast, almost anything goes in modern art. And that's precisely what Voth likes—its spirit of freedom and energy. Currently, he is trying to incorporate "the surface technique and the energy you think about in ceramics into my printmaking."

"I don't necessarily want to get rich off of my work. I guess if I felt like getting rich was the most important thing in my life, I'd work in a factory. I just feel like 'why do art?' Sure, you've got to do it because you want to, but if it's worth something, it should be recognized as well," said Voth.

Since one of Voth's long-range goals is to be recognized as a producing artist, he looks to moving to an area of the U.S. where his art will be more accessible. Voth also hopes to get a master's in clay as well as a teaching position at a college.

PUTTING THE PIECES TOGETHER, Brian Voth finishes up a project.

Isaak Hopes to Teach at Bethel

by Milan Zuzek

Senior Garth Isaak will be graduating this spring from school with many memories—memories which came from experiences he has had here at Bethel College.

Garth came to Bethel five years ago. His first year was a very typical freshman year. School did not appeal to Garth so he sat out the following year and worked with Mennonite Voluntary Service. "I was tired of school after my first year and decided to take a job with V.S. I worked in Portland, Or. repairing homes. I enjoyed the experience very much."

Garth returned to Bethel very enthusiastic. "By the time fall came around in 1981, I was excited to get back to school and learn more math and physics—two subjects that I enjoy very much."

He was a gifted student in math and physics and taught supplemental sessions in these areas to underclassmen. "I like to help people. Teaching these sessions made me realize that this type of work is what I wanted to do in years to come."

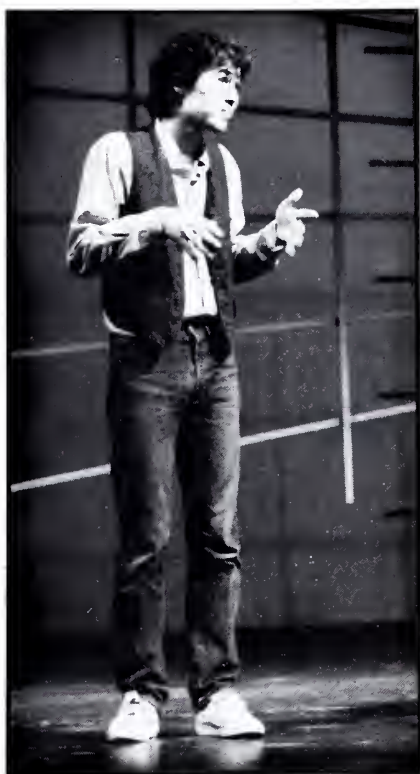

Garth's days at Bethel were filled with many interesting experiences. One thing that he wished he had done was to have more of a variety of classes. One experience which Garth has enjoyed very much was meeting and making friends with kids from all over the country.

Garth will be graduating with a major in three areas, math physics and chemistry. "When I complete my work in grad school, I would like to come back to Bethel and teach. Time will tell."

PRE-MED STUDENT AND ACTOR, Matsuda performs in Zoo Story.

Matsuda Displays Versatility

by Micheal Hatchett

Seichi Matsuda, dressed in blue jeans that he's had since a freshman in college, unshaven and wearing a pair of thick glasses, replies with a laugh, "Seichi actually means 'pure one' in Japanese." The two hardly seem synonymous.

Seichi, known by his friends as Seich, is a second year senior with a double major in Chemistry and Biology. Although this is his second year here as a senior, he still won't be graduating. "I won't graduate from Bethel because I don't have enough convocation credit, and also I don't have my oral interp. hours."

This small setback won't stop Matsuda now though. He plans to go to medical school next year and will attend either Washington or Yale University.

Although Seichi wants to become a doctor after med. school, his real ambition is to be an actor. "I want to be an actor and work as a doctor to keep up my acting career."

If this seems a phenomenal task, it's just what Seichi is looking for. He has been involved in many major productions at Bethel, his most recent being My Fair Lady and Zoo Story.

Aside from acting, Seichi has been involved in research at the National Institute of Health. There he studied diabetes and performed research on a herpes vaccine that will be available in approximately five years.

All this from someone who almost didn't make it to Bethel at all. "I was planning to go to Goshen, but my sister got married the day I was to leave. Some of my sister's friends from Bethel that were at the wedding told me they would take me to Bethel, so I threw my stuff in their station wagon and ended up there. The rest is history."

Roughton Composes All Types of Music

by Kelly Gerbrandt

There has only been one other person to major in composition at Bethel in the past decade. Senior Brian Roughton plans on being the next person to do it. Brian, 27 years of age, plans on graduating in December.

Brian transferred to Bethel from Pittsburg State University and has been studying composition here for the last three years. He has been busy during that time, doing everything from writing a full jazz band chart for 21 instruments to writing several pop songs.

He also plays guitar in the jazz ensemble, sings in the choir and has held roles in several plays.

Brian said, "Something I'm excited about is the piece I'm working on now which is a choral piece which is called 'I have a dream' and is based on the same speech by Martin Luther King, Jr." The choir will be performing the piece at Brian's senior recital in November.

When asked about what he would like to do after graduation, Brian said, "I plan on going into developmental work in the peace corps or getting my master's in composition; it's going to be one or another."

"The thing I would be interested in doing someday would be to get into publication, to compose music for anything from cartoons to movie music," said Brian when asked about what he is looking into in the future.

"CALORIE! CALORAH!" At Faculty Follies, the whole Poppyseed Gang gets in on "My Body is Obese." Even President Schultz dons T-shirt and joins in the fun.

"ALMOST BLUEGRASS," Bob Clack and Mark Stucky, perform "You Just Stomped on My Heart."
